CUPID'S FOND HOPES REALIZED.

Miss Carrie E. Pate and Prof. Rufus McCoy Were Married in Louisville Friday Night.

BRIDE VERY POPULAR GIRL.

The first prank that Cupid has played in Cloverport social circles for many moons was the marriage of Prof. Rufus McCoy and Miss Carrie E. Pate, which was solemnized Friday night at the Willard Hotel in Louisville. The ceremony was said by Rev. Mr. Shelly, a former pastor of this place.

The young couple had been engaged for some time, but their serious plans were not hinted to the bride's parents Mr. and Mrs. Henry Pate. When they left this city Friday afternoon only one or two friends knew the secret of their trip.

Prof. McCoy is the first assistant in the Cloverport High School and is an excellent young man who has made good along all lines. The bride is a lovely girl, and very popular. The News joins many friends in wishing Prof. McCoy and Mrs. McCoy much happiness.

TEACHERS' MEETING

At Irvington Arouses Interest Among Patrons and Scholars--Citizens Delightfully Entertained.

The teachers' meeting for this district, the last one for this school year, convened here in the chapel hall of the college building Saturday afternoon.

The rain and mud kept many away. Although the elements were against us, we had an excellent meeting.

The welcome address was not given except in the very cordial way in which the good people received and entertained the teachers in their homes.

Prof. Pile, who was to respond to the welcome address, gave an excellent talk. He paid a high tribute to Mrs. Piggott, stating that she was one of the brightest literary lights in Kentucky as well as a very remarkable woman in many other ways. He remarked that this lady came from Hardinsburg. He said that whenever Hardinsburg got a good thing, Irvington could not rest content until she had something as good or better. Prof. Martin came first to Hardinsburg, and it was Prof. Pile who brought him into the county. He felt that Irvington is a town of great energy and activity. It would be difficult to tell all the good things said about our little growing city by this teacher who has for years been deeply interested in the schools of this county and State.

Prof. H. R. Kirk, one of our college teachers, was next on the program. His subject, "The Importance of Prompt and Regular Attendance at School," was well presented. Mr. Kirk closed his remarks by telling us that the consolidating of our normal schools would solve the problem of prompt and regular attendance.

The subject was then taken up by Prof. R. E. McFarland, Superintendent of Daviess County Schools, and discussed at some length. Mr. McFarland's talk was both entertaining and instructive.

At the close of Supt. McFarland's remarks, Prof. Maxey, principal of the High School of Hardinsburg, asked the question, "In the absence of consolidated schools, what shall we do under present conditions to secure prompt and regular attendance?"

Prof. Martin answered this question by saying that he felt that our good county superintendent accomplished much good by holding these teachers' meetings all over the county. In these teachers' meetings we meet the teachers, or most of them, of each district, and very few of the patrons attend. Our object should be to have the patrons attend such meetings and to have them take part in these discussions. Show the patrons that we, as teachers, wish to know them and their children in their home life. Prof. Martin urged the necessity of organizing the patrons into a society for the purpose of discussing all subjects of vital interest to their children in connection with the schools.

Prof. Jasper Head, principal of the Irvington Public School, gave a good talk on "How to Teach Reading." Mr. Head handled his subject well and brought out many strong points. We regret that the young teachers in all over the county could not have heard Mr. Head's excellent instruction.

Our time was limited and Supt. Driskell was as full as ever of good things to say to the teachers, but this time we gave most of the time to his teachers and visitors.

Prof. A. T. Gentry gave a short talk on "The Importance of Penmanship in the School Course." He stated that poor equipments and incompetent teachers were causes that prevented the subject from being taught properly.

Prof. Lewis O'Brien presented "Some of the Difficulties of English Grammar." Mr. O'Brien's talk shows that he has studied grammar closely.

Prof. A. Y. Maxey gave an interesting address on "Beacon Lights." Every sentence of his lecture was full of rich and beautiful thought.

The music for the occasion was furnished by Miss Virginia Galloway and Miss Mary Alexander.

Supt. Driskell heartily thanked Irvington for the gracious reception and entertainment.

PRESIDENT REFUSES TO

PARDON G. B. SHAW

Washington, Jan. 21.—The president, acting on the advice of Attorney General, Wickersham, has refused to issue a pardon to George B. Shaw, of Louisville. Shaw was a railway clerk convicted of rifling postage, but there were extenuating circumstances. Representative Swagar Sherley, by request took up the case with the president, but Mr. Wickersham declined to advise clemency, and the president agreed with him.

When given as soon as the crowd appears Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will ward off an attack of cough and prevent all danger and cause of anxiety. Thousands of mothers use it successfully. Sold by all dealers.

THOS. NEUBAUER PASSES AWAY

Established First Bakery In Owensboro---Father Of John Neubauer Of This City. --Was Seventy Six Years Old

FUNERAL HELD SUNDAY

Mr. Thomas Neubauer, an aged and highly respected citizen, died at 8 o'clock Thursday morning, death being due to infirmities incident to old age. He was too ill to perform any kind of labor for about four weeks before his death. He was the first baker the city ever had, his business operated under the name of the City Bakery from the time he established it 59 years ago till his death. His business occupied the building in which it is at present located for over forty years. Mr. Neubauer was a modest and unassuming man, possessed a high sense of honor, and he enjoyed the esteem and confidence of all who knew him.

Mr. Neubauer was born in the kingdom of Bavaria, on January 7, 1835, and came to Owensboro to reside in August, 1852 and he was engaged in the bakery business here from that time until his death, except the time he served in the Union army as a baker.

Two years after coming to Owensboro he was married to Miss Schriffel of Jeffersonville, Ind., in the year 1854, and after her death he married Mrs. Margaret Wagner of Owensboro, October 7, 1892. He never resided outside the city during his 59 years residence here. He was the father of 14 children, six of whom are living. They are: Mrs. J. W. Laue, Miss Christina Neubauer, Mrs. Chas. Hale, of Rockport, Ind.; Thos. Neubauer, Jr., John Neubauer, of Cloverport, and Mrs. Elmer Mahoney. He is also survived by 12 grandchildren, and three great grandchildren. Mr. Fred Seifried of Curdsville is his brother-in-law. His brothers and sisters are all dead. Mr. Frank Wagner is a step son by his second wife. He has two step daughters residing in Evansville.

The funeral took place from the Zion Evangelical church at 2 p.m. Sunday, the services were conducted by the pastor, Rev. H. F. Grefe—Owensboro Enquirer.

TEACHERS SEND SUPT. DRISKELL AWAY

For a Little Journey to California to Attend the National Teachers' Meeting Next July.

SUPT. GREATLY SURPRISED.

At the close of the Teachers' Association at Irvington Saturday Pres. Martin requested Supt. Driskell to stand, whereupon he, Martin, formally charged the superintendent with having been too busy for the last twenty years. Continuing, he said, "You are tired, and we are tired, too, so tired that we wish to send you away to California—as far as we can send you that you may rest and attend the National Teachers' Association in July. We take pleasure in presenting you a check to defray your expenses."

Overcome with surprise and pleasure, Mr. Driskell yet found words to thank the fifty-seven donors whose cheerful and liberal giving sends him on a trip across the continent, a valuable adjunct to any man's education. We append the names of the contributing teachers:

PAUL MORTON.

until 1890, when he engaged in the coal and iron business. During the period from 1890 to 1896 he was vice president of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company and president of the Whitebreast Fuel company.

Mr. Morton's natural bent for railroading, however, was too strong to allow him to abandon that field at that time. In 1896 he became third vice president of the Santa Fe system and two years later was promoted to be second vice president.

When he entered the Santa Fe offices the system's annual earnings were $34,000,000. When he left it the yearly earnings had reached $64,000,000, an increase of nearly 100 per cent in seven years.

It was concerning freight rebates that Mr. Morton was criticized after his appointment in 1904 as secretary of the navy. He never denied that rebates had been given by the Santa Fe to favored shippers, justifying the action on the ground of necessity.

Mr. Morton served just a year as secretary of the navy, from July 1, 1904, to July 4, 1905. While secretary he advocated enlargement and increased efficiency of the navy and effected improvements in methods of administration.

Became Insurance Head.
In June, 1905, Mr. Morton tendered his resignation as secretary of the navy to accept the presidency of the Metropolitan Street Railroad company, the control of which had been acquired by Thomas F. Ryan, but he never assumed the duties of that position.

This was just after the insurance investigation, and the consequent reorganization of the Equitable Life Assurance society had just begun. To Mr. Morton, who had come to New York to look over street railroad matters, was tendered the chairmanship of the executive board of the Equitable Life, which he accepted. Thus in four years he held four positions of great power, any one of which might have been considered the summit of an ordinary man's ambition.

ECONOMIC DETAIL HIS HOBBY.

Headed Equitable Life After Legislative Exposures, Following Resignation From Roosevelt's Cabinet—Was Central Figure In Freight Rebating Charges Six Years Ago.

The career of Paul Morton, who died suddenly in a New York hotel recently, was divided into three distinct periods of greatly varying lengths. From 1872 to 1904 he was a railroad man, in 1904-5 secretary of the navy in President Roosevelt's cabinet, and after that president of the Equitable Life Assurance society.

He was born in Detroit, May 22, 1857. His father was J. Sterling Morton, secretary of agriculture during President Cleveland's second administration, the founder of Arbor day. His mother was Miss Caroline Joy, of a prominent Detroit family. When six months old he was taken to Nebraska City, where he remained on his father's homestead until he was sixteen years of age.

Mr. Morton's connection with transportation even antedated his employment by the Burlington railroad at $16 a month, in 1872. In the old days of the California trail he often watched long wagon trains, drawn by mules and oxen, go slowly by his father's Nebraska farm. His first ambition was to be a wagon boss or stage driver.

Began as Land Clerk.

Beginning as a clerk in the land office of the Burlington railroad system in 1872, Mr. Morton rapidly gained advancement and when he was twenty-one had become the assistant general freight agent of that line. Afterward he became its general passenger agent and later its general freight agent, remaining in the latter post

ELKINS OWED LIFE TO BANDIT COLE YOUNGER

SENATOR STEPHEN B. ELKINS of West Virginia, who died recently, has had his fame as a great railroad pioneer and as secretary of war in the cabinet of President Harrison obscured in the popular mind by the rumors about the engagement of his daughter to the Duke of the Abruzzi. He was born in Perry county, O., on Sept. 26, 1841. His father was a farmer and moved while he was still a boy to Missouri. He was graduated from the university of that state in 1860 and took up the study of law.

Just as he was admitted to the bar the civil war started, and Mr. Elkins showed his individuality by breaking away from his family and all his home ties to enlist in the Union army. His father and brother fought for the Confederates, but he joined the Missouri militia and served long enough to earn the rank of captain.

Soon after he joined he met with an adventure which nearly cost him his life. With his leader he left the Union lines to visit a woman friend of the family, and as he was returning he ran into a platoon of Quantrell guerrillas. They were noted for their brutality and were known to shoot at their prisoners.

Saved by Cole Younger.

Mr. Elkins was taken to the guerrilla camp and there fortunately recognized Cole Younger, an old friend and pupil of his. Younger interceded with Quantrell for the future senator and obtained a respite. As the guerrillas moved off Mr. Elkins had to ride with them, but as he reached the crossroads galloped off for his life. Younger held his captors in check, and he escaped. Younger, after the war, became a bandit and was a member of the Jesse James gang. He was sentenced to imprisonment for life, and years after Senator Elkins not only helped to secure his release, but received him at his own home when he was a free man.

Before the war was over Mr. Elkins left the army and in 1864 struck across the plains to New Mexico, then a border territory of which two-thirds of the population were Spanish. He acquired that language in the course of a year and soon secured a large law practice. He was elected to the legislature and also served as territorial attorney general. President Johnson made him territorial United States district attorney, and he was one of the few New Mexico officials whom General Grant did not dismiss.

It fell to his lot as a federal official to enforce the act of congress prohibiting slavery. At that time there were in New Mexico thousands of persons, who to all intents and purposes were enslaved by the Mexican residents. The abuse had been tolerated so long that it had become a regular social custom, but Mr. Elkins, in the face of vigorous opposition, insisted on the restoration of these unfortunate to freedom.

But besides enforcing the law he was amassing a fortune. His law practice was lucrative, and he had little competition. In particular he was associated with the Maxwell land grant, which, through his loyal services, received the confirmation of the courts.

Re-elected Despite Declination.

Mr. Elkins first appeared in Washington as the delegate to congress from the territory of New Mexico in 1873. His popularity among the Spanish secured him the handsome major-

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Peoria, Ill.—"I wish to let every one know what Lydia E. Pinkham's remedies have done for me. For two years I suffered. The doctors said I had tumors, and the only remedy was the surgeon's knife. My mother bought me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today I am a healthy woman. For months I suffered from inflammation, and your Sanative Wash relieved me. Your Liver Pills have no equal as a cathartic. Any one wishing proof of what your medicines have done for me can get it from any druggist or by writing to me. You can use my testimonial in any way you wish, and I will be glad to answer letters."—Mrs. CHRISTINA LEED, 105 Mound St., Peoria, Ill.

Another Operation Avoided.
New Orleans, La.—"For years I suffered from severe female troubles. Finally I was confined to my bed and the doctor said an operation was necessary. I gave Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial first, and was saved from an operation."—Mrs. LILY PEYROUX, 1111 Kerlerec St., New Orleans, La.

The great volume of unsolicited testimony constantly pouring in proves conclusively that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a remarkable remedy for those distressing feminine ills from which so many women suffer.

HORNED MAN-MONKEYS FOUND

Skeletons of queer shape exhumed in California.

What are described as skeletons of strange tribe of horned man-monkey pygmies are being exhumed from an ancient burying ground discovered near Jackrabbit Lodge, in the delta of Topanga canyon, near Santa Monica, Cal. Forty-four skulls and almost as many complete sets of torso and limb bones have been recovered, together with strange antiquities apparently used by the tribe as weapons and many stone mortars.

The tribe is thought to have been the last of the kind, and it is asserted by a legend of the oldest Spanish families that Aztec Indians exterminated them upon their invasion into southern California.

STORIES WRITTEN

While The Press Thunders

BY LOUISE

Last week we had the honor of entering three or four of the general offices of the large department stores of Louisville and while we were making our brief visits we were particularly impressed^w with the politeness of the managers,—the larger the firms were, more polished were their men. One office was furnished with handsome mahogany furniture, desks, writing tables with chairs to match. The floor was covered with green carpet as soft as velvet. The manager was cleverly dressed, his linens were immaculate, and we watched him as a country girl watches the new man who has just come to town. As we started to say—the politeness of the men to one another—their courtesy attracted us. "I shall be very glad to listen to you," said this manager as he received a business caller—just at lunch time too! Those words "shall be very glad" are enough to make any man try to sell his goods—so we came home, resolved to use them when traveling men and others call at our office. Heretofore, we confess we have been slow and indifferent about receiving strangers—that is we have been slothful to be as courteous as we might.

Often men have come to our office and we have deliberately taken our time in merely turning from our desk to meet them. Of course we knew better, just neglectful!

And to, we noticed how polite the middle-age men were—frequently middle age men leave off politeness like a woman leaves off priming when she becomes a certain age. Anything on earth that pleases us is for our friends among the old men to tip their hats as we pass!

There is one polite man in Louisville whose good-bye is worth your rail-road fare. When he hasn't time to talk to you he has such a polite, pleasant way of saying goodbye that makes one want to leave just to be accomodating. Honestly, he can sift humanity out his office door as easily as flour can be sifted through a sifter! Once we were there and he got five of us away before we knew it! We looked back and there was one human being sitting in a chair near his desk—stuck in it like a piece of dough. He was trying to politely get him out. Anyway, that man's goodbyes are worth five dollars each. They always contain words of good cheer, encouragement, come back again—when you haven't much time. Each one is wrapped up with politeness and they are always pleasant.

And you say those very polite men are not sincere. Did you ever see a diamond that was not genuine sparkle every day?

Really, tis worth while to be polite in the office or over the chicken lot fence!

Some one asked little Jane Lamar Sawyer what she learned at Sunday School and she replied: "The Lord is my shepherd I cannot want."—But Jane like the rest of us, is always wanting something!

ooo

"Dress Up" is a good motto for a gloomy day. If you get in the dumps put on your Sunday clothes. Before you know it some one will be saying, how nice you look—and a compliment will help drive the gloom away every time.

"Why on earth don't you open this door and let some fresh air in this house?" commanded a real-estate man to his renter who has recently moved to Cloverport from the rural districts. "We shut our doors and windows tight a purpose, answered the renter, "cause we heeded this here 'town air' ain't healthy."

TAXPAYERS LISTEN!

By permission of my employer, the Sheriff, I am going to extend the time for the final payment of taxes in this district one more month, JUST THIRTY SHORT DAYS. At the end of that time, which will be Feb. 1, 1911, I am going to advertise every man's, woman's or child's list that is left on my books on that day unpaid.

Now, if you think I am not in earnest about this matter just let the time pass and see what the result will be, but I would much rather you stop this right now because it only means additional cost to you.

If you let this time pass you need not blame me when you are forced to pay several dollars cost. This will be my last appeal for 1910 taxes but it will appear just as many times as there are issues of the Breckenridge News between now and the 1st day of February, 1911.

At Louisville Play Houses

DE WOLF HOPPER IN NEW PLAY.

De Wolf Hopper, one of Louisville's big favorites, will appear at the Shubert Masonic Theater on Monday January 30, for three days' engagement, in his latest New York and Chicago success. "A Matinee Idol." Mr. Hopper will be supported by Miss Louise Dresser and the entire New York company which player with him during his four months' run at Daly's and the Lyric Theater in New York.

THE MARY ANDERSON.

Oscar Wilde's "The Picture of Dorian Gray" has been transformed into an artistic little vaudeville playlet by Edwards Davis, M. A., and next week it will be put on view at B. F. Keith's Mary Anderson Theatre in Louisville by Mr. Davis himself, in a cast including Miss Adele Blood and Mr. Templar Saxe. When it comes to the haunting lines from Wilde's "The Balad of Reading Gaol,"—"For all men kill the things they love,"—powerfully given by Mr. Davis, one may differ with the statement, but never deny the beauty, even in such an incarnation of pessimism.

Besides this sketch there will be a bill of unusual excellence. Georg Austin Moore, the protean character singer and monologuist, will contribute his latest assortment of comic hits. The Six Abdallahs in a New York Hippodrome feature, which is making its first tour of the country. Clark and Bergman will present a little skit called "A Baseball Flirtation," with song and dance trimmings. McKay and Cantwell, a team of daunting comedians from the musical comedy field, will present their amusing little satire, "On The Great White Way." Miss A'yoie, who has been called "The Danish Yvette Guilbert," is a dainty and fascinating singer. Chas. Montrell and company will give a series of comic feats in legerdemain. The Navas, a European importation, will have a striking novelty, and the latest in animated photography will complete the bill.

Correction

Miss Gladys Sims wished it corrected that she was not present at Miss Helen Miller's pound party, not because she has anything against the hostess, but because some who were the guests, she says were not friends of hers. The names of the guests were given to the News before the party took place.

Doan's Kidney Pills bring quick relief.

Bring thorough, lasting cures.

That's what Cloverport sufferers want.

Proof then by another's testimony.

Twice told and well confirmed.

G. W. Waddell, M. D., Main & Cross Streets, Elizabethtown, Ky., says: "I publicly recommended Doan's Kidney Pills some years ago, knowing of many cases where they had been used with the best possible results and my confidence in them during the past four years has not been shaken in the least.

It may seem rather out of the ordinary for a practicing physician to recommend a proprietary medicine and I must say that there are only a few remedies that are worthy of praise. I have prescribed Doan's Kidney Pills very often and I know of many permanent cures that have resulted from their use. I do not hesitate to advise persons who suffer from kidney complaint in any of its various forms to give Doan's Kidney Pills trial."

CHAPTER IV.

ALIENTINE'S face revealed the thrill of surprise that shot through him as he learned that the man before him was no less a personage than the lieutenant governor of the state. And he might intercede for him; he might ask the governor for a pardon! At the same time Valentine was not insensible of the important part the girl at the state official's side had played in bringing about his change of fortune. She had called her uncle's attention to him and had evidenced keen interest in him. He would never forget that.

She stood now at the lieutenant governor's side, uncertain as to exactly what attitude she should maintain toward the young man in prison stripes who stood before her uncle and to whom she owed a lifelong debt of gratitude.

It was most embarrassing indeed, she concluded. She wondered what rule of etiquette applied in the case of a girl of eighteen who desired to enter into conversation with a convicted safe breaker. The flush in her cheeks mounted to her forehead, and into her soft brown eyes came the dancing, changing lights that were telltale of her impulsive temperament.

Jimmy Valentine, conscious of the girl's delicate beauty and noticing that he still seemed to be the especial object of her attention, found difficulty in preserving an even demeanor. Finally, however, he secured a firm grip on himself and preserved a calm, undisturbed bearing with which even the watchful warden himself could find no fault. He addressed the lieutenant governor.

"After all," he said, "I think I will talk to you."

Handler did not approve of the turn events had taken.

"Oh, you will talk, will you?" he said threateningly to the prisoner.

Valentine was aware of the meaning of the warden's sinister tones. He had been an unwilling eyewitness on more than one occasion to the vengeance wreaked by the official on helpless prisoners who had aired their troubles or their experiences or those of fellow prisoners to the visitors from the outside world.

"You can't frighten me, warden," he announced defiantly. "I know I am taking a chance when I talk to an outsider, but"—and the dash that revealed in him the strong man's dauntless spirit came into his eyes—"I'll take that chance and all others for the one chance I have here to speak for myself—for my liberty."

The warden, appreciating the futility as well as the lack of wisdom in attempting anything further in the lieutenant governor's presence, subsided.

Fay turned to his niece.

"Rose, are you sure this is the man?" he said in low tones.

The girl unhesitatingly stepped toward the convlet.

"Mr. Valentine, have you ever seen me before?" she asked.

"Yes," replied No. 1289 without a falter.

"Can you tell me where?"

"Yes." He directed his eyes significantly toward the warden.

The lieutenant governor caught the suggestion and said:

"Warden, might I ask that this man, my niece and I be left alone for a moment?"

"Why?"

"I have asked a favor of you, Mr. Handler. I will be responsible for your prisoner, and the ladies will pardon me, I know."

"Oh, certainly!" spoke Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Webster simultaneously and walked out of the room.

But Handler was not so quietly disposed of. He snapped at Fay:

"Valentine will tell a straight story, barring a few facts. He was crook; had part of the coin stolen. If you can jump that pardon him." The warden leaned forward and leered into the prisoner's face, saying, "If you try to make a sucker of me you'll get yours."

Handler strode hastily out into one of the corridors of cells.

Rose again addressed the convlet.

"Where did you see me before?"

"On the New York Central train between Buffalo and Rochester on the 8th of June two years ago. You were alone in the parlor car. I came in and saw a man sitting on the arm of your chair. You were pale and frightened. I pulled him away and took him into the smoking compartment. He came back again, and I a moment later heard you scream. I came in, and he attacked me. I hit him and threw him through the window."

Rose extended him her hand, which he eagerly grasped.

"And then after you threw the man through the window," asked Fay,

"will you not tell me what you did, Mr. Valentine?"

"I was afraid I might have killed the man, so I left the train by the wrong side at the next station."

"He was badly hurt—died later, did he not?"

"Yes, sir."

"Was he a friend of yours?"

"No, sir."

"Ever see him before?"

"No, sir."

"But he confessed that he was your partner in robbing the bank—why?"

"Likely because I threw him from the train."

"How did you come by the money identified as having been stolen from the bank?"

Valentine paused a moment before his reply.

"I won it of him playing whist on the train just before the row."

"Is Valentine your name?"

"No, sir."

"Then how did he know you as Valentine?"

"He asked my name while we were playing cards, and as I thought it none of his business I told him Valentine."

"What is your business?"

"I was originally an expert accountant; then I became an expert with the Globe Safe company."

"Tell me, did you give this evidence at the trial?"

"No, sir."

"Why not?"

"The man who confessed had died. If I had told this story they would

"CAN YOU TELL ME WHERE?" SHE ASKED have tried me for murder; that would have brought the lady in."

Rose Lane gave a gasp of ecstasy as she heard Jimmy Valentine's final words. She clasped her hands enthusiastically and turned to the lieutenant governor, exclaiming as she did so:

"Oh, uncle, just to think that he would not try to help himself keep out of jail by telling about rescuing me from that ruffian. And all because he didn't want to drag me into the case."

Rose drew a deep breath and gazed adoringly at Jimmy Valentine.

"Oh, uncle," she cried, "Isn't he a perfectly dear safe breaker?"

When Jimmy Valentine recovered from the effect of Rose Lane's flattering description of him and felt that he could look the lieutenant governor in the face without the twich of a single muscle he asked his question if there was anything further that he cared to know.

"Yes," responded Fay. "I appreciate any thought you may have had for the young lady, my niece. But as you did not know her, had never before met her and could therefore have had little or no interest in her, I do not see how any thought of her would have influenced your actions. What think you, Mr. Valentine?"

No. 1289 was temporarily non-plussed by the penetrating perception and cold analysis of the lieutenant governor, who was questioning him as though he was on trial for his life, with Fay as the cross examiner.

"I mean," began Valentine—"I mean they would have convicted me of murder on her testimony very probably—at least that is what I feared if they knew about her and got hold of her as a witness against me. I did not believe they could convict me on the burglary charge."

Rose Lane's enthusiasm began to cool as she heard her hero in his explanation but that, after all, there might have been some other motive than that of and for her in his refusal to drag her into vulgar, sordid murder case. She was not experienced enough to realize that Jimmy Valentine had to satisfy the keen, searching, though with kind hearted lieutenant governor, whose questions suggested a doubt of the convict's innocence. But the faith of the girl was not entirely shaken. She knew that this unfortunate young man would surely straighten out everything in the end. How could any one with so gracious and winning a smile and with such adorable eyes ever have committed a crime greater than the pillage of his grandfather's jam closet? Yes, he was the victim of some strangely terrible plot, of heinous machinations like those of the French revolution or of the Spanish inquisition.

The lieutenant governor continued to press Valentine.

"But once convicted," he went on, "it seems to me that you would have made an application for a new trial."

"My lawyer is working on that now, sir."

Rose pressed her uncle's hand and looked pleadingly at the state official as though supplicating his further aid for the prisoner. The lieutenant governor was responsive to the fair young girl's influence, and after a pause he spoke the words that were to fill with a new hope the tortured soul of Jimmy Valentine.

"Tell your lawyer to apply for a pardon. I promise you he shall have every possible assistance in his effort to secure it."

"Thank you, sir; thank you," murmured the prisoner gratefully, but his eyes turned involuntarily to those of the girl, who he well knew was really responsible for his new opportunity.

"And you can thank my niece, too," added Fay.

"I thank her most deeply."

"That's all," said Fay, moving away and beckoning to Rose.

Johnson Answers Senator McCreary

men and make it read $50,000, then it shall have my most hearty support.' And instead of the miserable $12,000 for which they asked, I have not searched the records, but my recollection is that they got $30,000.

Wants Better Roads.

"If you wish me to repeat, I can say that I wish to see better roads in this country. I wish to see a macadamized road lead to every church and to every schoolhouse in our State. When that has been done our children can be educated and the Gospel of Christ can be preached, not to empty benches, but to men, women and children who have come to hear the Good Word."

"Now, if this is the last time that Gov. McCreary proposes to run, just like the other race was his last time, I ask you people who have ambition to serve your country in office (and when he is more vigorous now than he was thirty-five years ago), pray tell me when comes the chance of your children and your grandchildren?"

"Now, Senator McCreary has a most popular way of telling you things that he is for. He says that when he went out of Congress three counties had been taken from this district before the Democratic candidates could carry it. I say, fellow citizens, that if he had remained in Congress one more time you might have been compelled to leave in this Congressional district only the county of Shelby.

McCreary's Bailiwick.

"We have just had an election in which the Democrats swept from ocean to ocean and from the gulf to the lakes. The Republicans suffered defeat everywhere. There was one place, however, left upon the map; there is one oasis in the Republican desert, to which they can yet point with pride, and that is that Senator McCreary's county went Republican when everything else went Democratic. Even the good old Republican county of Rockcastle, with its overwhelming Republican majority, has fallen in the scales, and when Senator McCreary says that he has helped in his own county it has risen to be the banner Republican county of this, the eighth district.

"Why, he said, referring to the Gaddie matter—gentlemen, I have been over that here once—but I don't believe that all of you heard it, because there were not so many people here then as today; but I did say that the Louisville Herald published the statement that my Republican opponent had undertaken to form Democratic clubs of five McCreary men in each precinct that I might be beaten for Congress and Senator McCreary's race for the governorship made more easy. He said in his Owenton speech, and he tried to hedge a little bit today in making exact figures, that four years ago my Republican opponent got 32,000 votes, and that at this last election he only got 11,000 votes. When I went to school they taught me that if you subtract 11,000 votes from 22,000 votes that you have 11,000 left, but Senator McCreary, since he has been training with Percy Haley, has become a new scholar in addition and subtraction, and that is the way he figures it out.

"Who has denounced Percy Haley over this State more than has Senator McCreary?

Eighth District Politics.

"No, then, Senator McCreary says that after he went out of Congress in this district, that George Gilbert or Harvey Hulin or nobody else could carry it except himself; that it was necessary to take out three counties. I ask you, Senator, if you are not mistaken? Did you not have three counties taken out of this district while you were in, and that afterwards, alone, Jackson county was taken out? I have a note from a member of this audience saying that that is true. I do not know whether it is or not, because I have not kept up with the many changes in the Congressional districts that have been going on in the last number of years.

"Now Senator McCreary says that in the race between Hager and Willson, wherein candidates for the Legislature were running, that he made sixteen speeches. I never knew before how to account for Hager's defeat. He says that he made sixteen, and then turns to me and says, 'How many did you make?' I say in that race when Henry Hines was chairman of that committee that I spoke in this town and some of you people, perhaps, may remember that when Senator McCreary had gone all over the State of Kentucky and charged that Beckham and his gang had created twenty-three useless offices and had put Percy Haley in the best one of them, that I came here, and by the records proved to you that without Republican votes these twenty-three offices could not have been created.

"I made ten speeches in the county of Taylor in three days, and that county went Democratic.

Work During Presidential Campaign.

"Now then, when we come to the next race—the Presidential race—I answer that I did not make a single speech. The Democrats of Kentucky had asked me to become chairman of that campaign committee. You all will remember that I, as chairman of that campaign committee, stayed in headquarters for more than three long months; and I say here that in my humble effort to carry Kentucky for Bryan and Democracy that during the last four weeks of that campaign I never put my foot out of that house and onto the ground but three times, and those three occasions were when Mr. Bryan spoke in Louisville, when Senator Lindsey spoke in Louisville and when Champ Clark spoke in Louisville.

"Senator McCreary, I have not said that you were too old. You have said that you were not. Who accuses you but yourself. You say Joe Cannon is a sample of usefulness in old age. He is seventy-four years old. God pity us if in your seventy-fourth year you are to become like Joe Cannon.

"He says that he was over in the Tenth district making speeches for Floyd Byrd. Where is Floyd Byrd, the Democratic nominee? Where Senator McCreary made the most speeches there was the heaviest vote for the Republicans.

The Bolting Accusation.

"He says he is not a 'bolter.' I have not said that he was, but I have read from the speech of Gov. Beckham, made on the 12th day of March, a few days after Bradley defeated him, in which Governor Beckham said that except for the bolt of Senator McCreary that Bradley would not have been elected. He undertakes to define to you the meaning of the word bolter. I have never looked for it in the dictionary. I have never had any use for it; but when I do go to look for it I am going to look in the hearts of the Democrats of the State of Kentucky and ask them to define it, and not the dictionary.

"Senator McCreary said in his Owenton speech that he believed four or five Democrats in that Legislature did 'compliment' him by voting for him. Compliment? Great heavens, men! Compliment! When they complimented Ollie James by voting for him when there was a regular nominee, the wires from Washington flashed back the news to Frankfort from Ollie James that he would not be voted for, and he could not be voted for as long as there was a Democratic nominee.

"When the news was brought to Washington that on a certain day an attempted stampede would be made to Owsley Stanley, Congressman from the Second district, he did not risk the wires, he did not risk the mail, but he took the first train out of Washington for Frankfort to stand up and protest against any man 'complimenting' him as what we may justly term the 'bolters' compliment to Senator McCreary. Senator McCreary, your own representative did not compliment you? Who did compliment you—the man who brought about the defeat of the Democratic party and sent a Republican to Congress. I am not now familiar enough with the subject, from lack of memory, to say that four of those who voted for McCreary would have elected Beckham, but Gov. Beckham said in his speech on March 12: 'Eight of those Democrats refused to vote for me as the nominee of the party. One of those a few weeks ago passed away, and no criticism of him shall come from my lips. I shall speak only of the other seven, any four of whom could have elected me.'

"Now you say, Senator McCreary, that 'four or five men did compliment' you. By what?—by what the Democrats of the State of Kentucky know as imprinting upon your brow the word 'bolter' that you might thus finish a long and honorable career. 'Compliment' me not that way.

"He says that he went not to Frankfort. I say, Senator McCreary, you should have gone to Frankfort. You said in your Owenton speech that in a very 'dignified' manner you went to Washington there to perform your duties in Congress; that you wrote back not a letter to any living human being in that body; that you had absolutely nothing to do with it.

"Fellow citizens, he says he stands here for Jeffersonian Democracy. I say that it seems to me that when he left Kentucky—when the Democratic nominee for the United States Senate was in the direst distress, that he took with him to the city of Washington, and never sent it back, enough Jeffersonian Democracy to let the Democratic nominee for United States Senator be defeated. And if, Senator McCreary, you are again to be defeated when you are running your last race, will you, when you have gone to the great beyond, take with you so much Jeffersonian Democracy that the other 250,000 Democrats in the State of Kentucky will have none? He rises up in the center of these 250,000 Democrats in the State of Kentucky and says: 'I am the man to carry "my banner" to victory!' Fellow citizens, I believe he has grown into public life so thoroughly, so well, has stayed there so long, that he calls your banner his.

"All that I ask is that you give me 'your' banner, place it in my hands, and with as much confidence as Senator McCreary can say of himself, I say that I will place 'your banner' on the top of the State House at Frankfort and drive out those Republicans.

Compliments Ollie James.

"Now he goes on and tells you that the Republican party out at Denver put a plank in his platform, which has been discussed, guaranteeing a profit to the manufacturers and not guaranteeing a profit to the farmer. Now, both Senator McCreary and I heard Ollie James make that speech at Mt. Sterling, and it does not sound so well to me made by any other man as it does when it comes from the lips of Ollie James. I wish to pay him that one compliment, that he is the superior stump speaker of any man that I know of in Kentucky.

Offers Beckham His Aid.

"I want to say to you hurriedly that when the Beckham race was on with Bradley that I wrote to Gov. Beckham and offered to come down there at any time that he would wire me. He wrote back that if he needed me he would send for me, but that he did not see a place where anybody then could do him any good; that he believed that there would be no election, and the matter would go again to the people. I am not an egotist, I don't believe that I can stop all trouble or overcome all difficulties, but I do say this—that I was willing; that the Democratic nominee knew my willingness and that Senator McCreary solemnly pledged his word that he washed his hands of that affair when the primary was over; that he had nothing whatever to do with that Legislature and sought not to influence it. A willingness upon my part, I say, is better than an unwillingness upon his part.

"He said in every speech that he made in the Beckham race that if Beckham defeated him he would loyally stand by that nomination. He says to you now in the speeches that he is making that if he is defeated in this race that he will loyally support the nominee, and when I am that nominee I would like to have his support, but I do beg to be excused from being given the same support that he gave to Gov. Beckham in that race.

"He said in his Owenton speech, 'I believe that Gov. Beckham, upon the occasion of that banquet did have something to say about his bolting.' I believe he did, too. I believe that this public knows that Beckham had something to say about it; but he again says 'four or five men complimented me by vot ng for me.'

Origin in Cincinnati.

"He says he has been importuned by letters from ninety-one counties in this State asking him to make the race for Governor. I believe that but I believe more than that. I suspect that 91 per cent. of those letters had their origin in Cincinnati and were sent throughout the State to be mailed to him.

"He said in his Owenton speech that he would not be making a candid speech unless he said that he had before been Governor of this State. Senator McCreary, I would not have said that about you. You said that you must, in order to be frank, say that you had been Governor of Kentucky; that since you were Governor of Kentucky young men had grown up. There is Simon Bolivar Buckner; everybody knows that he was Governor of Kentucky. There is Proctor Knott, almost at death's door, one of the ablest and greatest men in this section—everybody knows that he was Governor of Kentucky. I am mentioning the men who are alive. Everybody knows that Senator Bradley was Governor of Kentucky, but it is necessary to come from the lips of Senator McCreary himself in order to make a candid speech to advise the young men now 35 years old and more that he was once Governor of Kentucky.

The Gaddie Articles.

"Now he said in relation to the Gaddie articles, that he did not know about them before he got my clippings that I sent to him, and I got his answer with only two weeks intervening before the election—Saturday and Monday—asking what I thought he ought to do. There was nothing then that he could do except to address a publication to the people of that district and say that no Democrat who favored his nomination for Governor should go into a combine with the Republicans to defeat a Democratic nominee for Congress. But he turns to me and says, 'What will you have me do?' My answer would have been, if you had had the time, 'Do your duty as a Democrat. Do your duty as the Democrats of the State of Kentucky know that you should.'

"Why, they are kicking and complaining about my being harsh to Senator McCreary. If I have been I am man enough to come and profoundly apologize; but I say that when you come here as a candidate with the uncle of Gov. Beckham to introduce you and to vouch for your Democracy, does Judge Beckham mean to say that Gov. Beckham did not tell the truth when he said that he laid his defeat at the door of Senator McCreary? But with all that I may have said, with its distortions, I have never said one-hundredth part as much against him as the very people who now have his campaign in charge. He has denounced Percy Haley from one end of the State to the other, and every time a man is summoned from one part of this State to aid in my defeat and in the election of Senator McCreary he is sent to the city of Cincinnati, not within the confines of this great and beautiful State of ours. It is known that a man of Hopkinsville was but recently summoned to the city of Cincinnati by Percy Haley for a conference in reference to this contest. What headquarters I have shall be in Kentucky, and if defeated, I will not go to the dictionary to look for the word 'bolter.' I will come back with the clean and untarnished Democratic record that I bear today, and no man from anywhere in this State, or anywhere else, bears a cleaner Democratic record than do I.
